

Health and Safety Training Consultant

International Workplace – based in London (Clerkenwell) or Cambridge

Who are we?

International Workplace is an established market leader in the provision of information, training, consultancy and support services, helping organisations to go beyond compliance in the workplace and build a better future. We are trusted by some of the UK's leading employers to provide them with friendly, professional support in the areas of health and safety, environmental management and employment relations.

Established in 1995, we have offices in Cambridge and London, serving clients in the UK and internationally. We have won a number of accolades for our work and we're accredited by a host of professional bodies (including CIPD, IEMA, IOSH and NEBOSH) to deliver their accredited training courses.

What we are looking for

We are looking for an experienced H&S professional to teach and mentor students in accredited health and safety training courses such as NEBOSH General Certificate and IOSH Managing Safely.

Our Training Consultant must also offer high-level support to clients and see training and consultancy work as complementary activities to help our clients to improve. You'll be highly commercial and committed to customer service. You'll be eager for clients to ask you technical questions and anxious to deliver the right answers consistently. Our clients are predominantly based in the UK, but there are opportunities for International travel with this role.

The role will be split across training (60%) and consultancy (30%) with some administration/team activities (10%) added into the mix. A unique opportunity, it's a very varied and involved role, where you meet new people with new issues that they want you to help them resolve – either through training or advice. Challenging but fun, and all about making a difference!

Do you have what it takes?

- We're looking for passion and inspiration. Not everyone is inspired by health and safety – we need you to be!
- You'll be a great communicator, with clients, in the classroom and with your HS team colleagues.
- You'll have high standards, work hard, and can be relied upon never to let the client down.
- You'll be up for travelling –in the UK and maybe internationally.
- You'll be commercially aware, giving pragmatic advice and delivering outcomes that create value for our clients and for our own business.
- You'll be rigorous and analytical – working methodically and meticulously by using our version control and record-keeping systems.
- You'll be up for the challenge – every project, every client and every day is different.

Key requirements:

In order to train for us you need to have

- NEBOSH National General Certificate, or Construction Certificate NVQ level 3 or recognised equivalent.
- Tech IOSH Membership
- Up-to-date CPD with IOSH
- Two years substantial face to face health and safety experience.
- Experience in undertaking audits against HSG65/OHSAS18001 or other similar recognised standards.

- Experience of working in a health and safety advisory role.
- Successful development and implementation of health and safety policies and procedures.
- Be GradIOSH or above
